Tickets are on sale now for the enchanting evening of entertainment and entertainment on Friday 23rd December 2011. This Gala is a key fundraiser for the charity and is the largest gala of its kind in the country. Tickets are fast selling out.Monsanto Company, which makes the controversial herbicide Roundup, is demanding that the tiny town of Santa Fe, New Mexico, pay it over $7.6 million for its Superfund designation. Called the "most polluted site in the US," the town's Superfund status means that the municipality will have to spend hundreds of millions of dollars cleaning up the chemical contamination. As these costs mount up, the town is considering alternative cleanup methods that will cost around $2.7 million. The company, however, wants to charge the town for the entire $7.6 million it says the site has cost. Monsanto's demand represents just the latest tactic to shove an enormous price tag onto small towns for the pollution they are forced to deal with. Other times, small towns have been forced to pay the cleanup costs for toxic waste sites through legal settlements. Most of these sites were found by New Mexico's EPA, as Los Angeles-based Bloomberg reported. Monsanto's threat to sue the town comes as the city is not providing any funding for the cleanup effort, according to community activist group El ComitÃ;n de Santa Fe (the City Council of Santa Fe). "The government does not require Monsanto to take responsibility for the contamination at the site, and the city is committed to not spending any public funds on the Monsanto cleanup unless and until Monsanto does the right thing," said the council in a press release. The EPA has told Santa Fe that it must pay for the cleanup, but Monsanto is refusing to 82157476af
